

DEVENEY COMMUNICATION

SENIOR STAFF

Chris Costello

Chris' varied interests add a unique aspect to Deveney Communication. Heading up technology and new media services, Chris blends his thorough understanding of computer systems and networking with his programming abilities to provide custom solutions that maximize efficiency and effectiveness for our clients. His knowledge allows clients to tap into technology to better reach their goals and objectives, keeping them a step ahead of their competition.

While he may often work behind the scenes, Chris's achievements are highly visible on the firm's Web site as well as Web-based client projects. Most notably he developed an online RSVP system that integrates current Web technology with contact databases. This provided an easy and effective way to keep nearly 1,000 invitations for our Sexagesimus celebration, simultaneously updating our records. The invitation, with an e-based RSVP, has received international recognition.

Chris is currently finishing the last phases of his doctoral work as an organic polymer chemist at Tulane University. He serves as point person in his chemistry group for upgrading and maintaining their computers and computer network and lends his technical expertise as to volunteer for local nonprofits.
